La Roche-Posay Anthelios 50 Mineral Ultra Light Sunscreen Fluid

($31; walmart.com)

If you're still not slathering yourself in sunscreen before you leave the house (yes, even in the winter), now's the time to start with this light sunscreen, specially formulated for breakout- or Rosacea-prone skin, says Rebecca Kazin, MD, of the Washington Institute of Dermatologic Laser Surgery. Even better, this stuff also gives your skin a natural glow in addition to advanced UVA/UVB protection.

Eucerin Calming Crème Daily Moisturizer

($15; walmart.com)

Combat dry winter skin with this itch-soothing, dryness-preventing moisturizer by Eucerin, suggests Kazin. It's fragrance-free and absorbs quickly, which means that your skin will feel moisturized and not like a slip-and-slide all day.

Cetaphil For All Skin Types Gentle Skin Cleanser

($7; walmart.com)

Is your skin dry? Oily? Combination? A weird mixture of all three, depending on the day? This product from Cetaphil will cleanse whatever condition your skin feels like taking on, suggests Kazin. "This gentle, non-drying cleanser is good for all skin types—it's my go-to when recommending something gentle that won't irritate a patient's skin," Kazin says.

Aquaphor Advanced Therapy Healing Ointment

($7; walmart.com)

You can use this healing ointment as both a beauty salve and a cut/scrape/burn protector. Slather it on whatever body part needs some extra TLC during the winter months after every shower for extra protection and moisture. "It's inexpensive and it really works—it's the best hydration for eczema or dryness-prone lips, hands, and feet," Kazin says.
